(Details below)

Dear Evan,

From the moment you are charged with a DUI, the clock begins to tick.

- If you want to try to get your license back, you have less than 5 days to hire a lawyer.
- Your trial date is almost always less than 2 months from the date you were charged and, thus, waiting just 14 days to hire a lawyer could severely handicap your defense.

No state moves faster in moving cases through the system than the “rocket dockets” of Virginia. In this internet information age the ability to quickly access a lot of information is significantly higher than in the past. The problem is- how do you separate the critical information from the hype and B.S.?

Don't let a night of drinking leave you with a hangover for life!

WARNING - this report is controversial especially among lazy lawyers who give misleading sales pitches THEN

- send a less experienced lawyer to court (at your expense!);
- talk a good game, but plead you guilty without a fight, and/or
- whose only actual contact with your case is when they cash your check for legal fees!

“How to Choose a DUI Lawyer in Virginia” will arm you with the 10 Questions you must demand that your lawyer give you a straight answer to!

- ❖ Who is going to be my lawyer at trial?
- ❖ What are his/her qualifications?
- ❖ Are they AV rated? “AV” = Highest rating possible for Legal Ability and Ethics
- ❖ Are they a former prosecutor? Where did they prosecute? (Continued on other side)

I have received national publicity for my defense of several current and former pro athletes. I am a former prosecutor and federal law clerk who has earned the highest ratings a lawyer can obtain for legal ability and ethics.
